

Week 5

Interrogative Sentences

Interrogative Sentences:

- asks a question
- Ends with a question mark
- Think of how a police office may interrogate a suspect.

Three ways to turn a sentence into an interrogative sentence:

C

Change the end mark.

Jesus wept.

Jesus Wept?

I

Interrogative pronoun replaces the subject (Who, whom, whose, which, what)

Jesus wept.

Who Wept?

When replacing a person:

- * use who for nominative case
"Who robbed the bank?"
- * use whom for objective case
"To whom did you give the money?"
- * use whose for possessive case
"Whose car did you drive away in?"

When replacing a thing:

- * use which for a known or limited answer
"Which bank did you rob?"
- * use what for an unknown or unlimited answer
"What were you thinking?"

A

Add a helping verb and change the verb tense as needed.

Jesus wept.

Did Jesus weep?

Vocabulary:

Emphatic Form:

When the word did is used as a helping verb in an interrogative or declarative sentence.

Examples: Jesus did weep. Did Jesus weep