

Week 7

Appositives, Adverbs, and Verb Moods

Appositive:

An appositive is a noun (or a pronoun) directly besides another noun that explains or identifies it. Only use commas when the appositive is “extra” (unnecessary) information. Extra Info = Extra Commas

Everyone knows that Trump is President, so this info is not necessary or is “extra.” Extra Info = Extra Commas

Trump, the President of the United States, tweets daily.

This one- Coco

If I own several dogs, then I would need to specify which dog I was talking about. Since the info is necessary, no commas are needed.

My Dog Coco gobbles the food off of my plate.

Adverb:

- Modifies a verb, adjective, or another adverb and answers the questions:

How?

Why?

To what extent?

When?

How often?

Under what condition?

Where?

How much?

Verb Mood:

Indicative

Makes a statement or asks a question.

Imperative

Makes a request or a command.

Subjunctive

Implies a condition, expresses a condition contrary to fact, or expresses a wish. (Week 23)

Vocabulary:

Adverb:

Modifies a verb, adjective, or another adverb.

Appositive:

A noun or a pronoun directly besides another noun which explains or identifies it. When diagramming, it is displayed in parentheses beside the noun it identifies.

Mood:

See Chart C; The manner or way that a verb expresses action or state of being.

Noun of Direct Address (NDA):

The person or thing which is being addressed, or directly spoken to. They are diagrammed on a platform above the subject.